

GLOBAL POPULISMS AND THEIR INTERNATIONAL DIFFUSION

Seawell Family Boardroom, Bass Center, Graduate School of Business

FRIDAY, March 1

8:15-8:45 Breakfast

8:45-10:30 Panel 1: How is Democracy Threatened?

Chaired by Anna Grzymala-Busse

- Henry Farrell, George Washington University, “The Democrat’s Dilemma: Information and Democratic Regime Stability”
- Seva Gunitsky, University of Toronto, “Autocratic Diffusion and Great Power Politics”
- Kate Starbird, University of Washington, “Disentangling the organic and the orchestrated? Online disinformation as collaborative work.”
- Herb Lin, Stanford University, “Cyber Threats to Electoral Integrity”

— 10:30-10:45: Coffee break —

10:45-12:30 Panel 2: Russia’s Global Efforts

Chaired by Frank Fukuyama

- Laura Rosenberger, The German Marshall Fund of the United States, “Russia’s Tools of Support for Illiberal Populist Forces”
- Josh Tucker, New York University, “Heads Will Troll: An Analysis of Links shared by IRA Twitter Accounts”
- Julia Davis, Russian Media Monitor, “The Two-Sided Sword of Russian Propaganda”
- Lucan Way, University of Toronto, "How Do We Know if Russia is a Threat to Democracy?"

— 12:30-1:30: Lunch —

1:30-3:00 Panel 3: Comparative Perspectives on International Diffusion

Chaired by Larry Diamond

- R. Daniel Kelemen, Rutgers University, “The European Union’s Authoritarian Equilibrium”
- Abraham Newman, Georgetown University, “The Nationalist International”
- Alina Polyakova, Brookings Institution, “Responding to the Illiberal Toolkit”

— 3:00-3:15: Coffee break —

3:15-4:45 Panel 4: Coming Attractions: The Changing Nature of the Threats
Chaired by Margaret Levi

- Amy Zegart, Stanford University, “The Dark Arts of Deception: What’s Old? What’s New? What’s Next?”
- Martin Schallbruch, Stanford University, “Doxing Political Leaders: The German ‘advent calendar’ case and the role of cybersecurity”
- Andrew Grotto, Stanford University, “Deep Fakes and the U.S. Political Process: Risk and Recommendations”

6pm: Dinner for Conference Participants

SATURDAY, March 2

8:45-9:15 Breakfast

9:15-11:30 Panel 5: The war at home? Domestic aspects of global diffusion
Chaired by Didi Kuo

- Pauline Jones, University of Michigan, “Perils of Populism: The Domestic Implications of Putin’s International Strategy”
- Mike McFaul, Stanford University, “Putinism: Exportable Ideology or Disruptive Virus?”
- Markos Kounalakis, Hoover Institution, “How Chinese and Russia Media Deploy Western Nationals to Reinforce Populist Sentiments”
- Steven Wilson, University of Nevada, “The V-Dem World Social Media Survey”
- Vikram Singh, Center for American Progress, “Populism as a domestic strategy?”

— 11:30-12:45 pm Lunch and concluding discussion—